The coronavirus pandemic has forced all of us to constantly change our daily routines. Do we go to work, to school, to a restaurant or on a vacation? Should our five-year-old start kindergarten or our 18-year-old move away to college? Is it safe to visit Grandma?

In these changing and uncertain times, all of us are being asked to make these difficult personal and family decisions. It's exhausting and also confusing. Who should we listen to for reliable advice? Who should we trust?

Our panel of experts will provide you with the latest clinical information pertaining to the coronavirus so that YOU can make the most informed decisions possible about the many questions regarding day-to-day activities.
